Typing and filing come easy to Sister Wilhelmina and Sister Catherine Teresa.

Sister Miriam St. John assumes her duties as Librarian.
Our correctors, Mrs. Helen Frawley (r) and Mrs. Helen Glidden, interview some of the students about their immortal prose.

You see Her in the strength it takes
For you to by-pass sin;
You see Her in the courtesy
That shouts above the din;
You see Her in the courage that
It’s sometimes hard to show;
You see Her in your willingness
To aid God’s love to grow.
You see Her smile in yours, it seems,
Whenever smiles must cry.
And when Her Son is close to you,
You know Her joy and why.

You see Her in you every time
Her qualities are yours,
And in your time Her tender love
Can open still all doors.
She’s real, She’s close, Her love for you
Is something sweet and rare,
And while the earth keeps spinning ’round
Her spirit you will share . . .

Maria . . . kneeling we have sighed
In such dear confidence . . .
We scarce remember
Now that once this name was spoken softly
In a time before the Aves rang.
Perhaps across some threshold it was said,
So casually, by one who called to her,
"Mary." . . . she turned and came and no one knew
That more was said than just a young girl's name.
She went about her duties just the same,
Ne'er dreaming that a second's breath would bring
An angel's "Hail," a God's request of her,
A people's prayer, a Mother's wish to her;
She never dreamed a humble "Fiat" said
Would bring to her the glories of the skies,
The praises of the world, a wee Son's love,
And motherhood to all humanity.

She looked with eyes unseeing all around
The stable, passing oxen, donkeys there
Quite by, for all her heart was filled with joy,
Gladness o'erwhelmed the humble place, and love,
And Glorias of angels praising God;
For she had borne the Son of God made man.
Ah yes, the Prince of Peace was there with her,
And she with Him and thus with us forever.
Wine for the gladness of a marriage feast,
For God had meant His children to be glad.
Wine failed and Mary saw the human need
And whispered to her Son, "They have no wine."
"It is not time," He answered, but she knew
He'd not refuse. "Whate'er He tells you, do."
Obedience is wine's price; joy's price as well
For gladness comes when' e'er we do His Will.

John said that Mary stood beneath the Cross.
She did not faint or cry—John said she stood.
E'en thus we find her where a cross today
Looms black against a cloud-filled, threat'ning sky.
Where sorrow is, I stand beside her there.
I am her hands, her heart, her second self
To ease the sorrow of a world oppressed,
Nor faint, nor cry. I stand beneath the cross
Because John said—she stood.
The Pentecostal flame found them in prayer
With Mary—Mother of the infant Church.
This grace had not been theirs apart from her,
They would have missed the courage it instilled
Into their wavering hearts . . .

They persevered

In prayer with Mary—so we read and know
Sanctity's secret—that no other where
Will grace be ours, nowhere except with her.
It is a truth that sinlessness could not
Decay. Death came as sleep and Jesus claimed
His Mother as His own and called her home.
Today she reigns in heav'n—about her brow
A starry crown with angels caroling
Her praise, but down she leans to hear
When we her children call to her in prayer.

Happiness is like the quality of mercy—it blesses him who gives and him who takes.
